ANG 650 SELECTED TOPICS I : Twentieth Century and Contemporary Irish Literature

This course is for undergraduates and presumes the capacity to read the materials in the original and to write a term paper in competent English.

Objectives

The aim of this course is to provide a survey of African North American Literature, with its main emphasis on African Canadian writing (prose, poetry, drama) from the mid-19th century to the present; in addition, students are introduced to relevant technical terms and critical perspectives that facilitate discussion and analysis of these works.

Content

We will read short stories, slave narratives, novels, essays, poems, and plays. Authors to be studied include Josiah Henson, Harriet Beecher Stowe, the tellers of several short slave narratives, Mary Ann Shadd, W.E.B. Du Bois, Langston Hughes, Mairuth Sarsfield, Austin Clarke, Dionne Brand, Djanet Sears, Wayde Compton, and George Elliott Clarke.

Pedagogical Method

Lectures, classroom discussion and short exercises. Students are expected to read assigned shorter texts in addition to the required novels and plays listed below, and should be able to ask and answer questions in each class about the texts under study.
